On the Cover—

This 1898 view northwest from the Southold Presbyterian Church steeple shows the corner of Horton and Main, and the home in the center (named “The Anchorage”) of Reverend Ephor Whitaker, long time Southold Presbyterian minister. To the left the steeple and cross of the original Saint Patrick Church is seen through the leaves (see page 7). This is one of the many photos in the little booklet sharing the cover. Loaned to us by Jenny Schlecht of Southold, this little booklet shows a Southold few of us have ever seen. Unless noted, the photos in this issue are taken from—

Looking south, this 1898 view is Southold's future monument turn in front of the American Legion. The little patch of grass in the foreground will become the land that the Civil War monument (named "At Parade Rest") now stands. This small plot is owned and maintained by the Southold Park District.
