On the Cover—

This circa 1950 view of Southold's M. S. Grand Five & Dime Store that now houses Complement the Chef and TouchGOODS. Kids from all around Southold rode their bikes to the village to this hangout for wax candy, bubble gum, fire balls, YoYos, plastic army jeeps and soldiers of all kinds, comic books and penny candy. Halloween was the best time with plastic lips (that you could wear, then chew like bubble gum) and all those little plastic bottles filled with different color liquids (which we would now guess to be pure sugar water!). The eastern side of the store sold sneakers and other rudimentary objects that defined the styles of the day.

The white gable that appears to the right belonged to Belmont Hall, razed in 1954 to make way for the present parking lot.

The Warren Lewis Tuthill House: Then & Now

by Jerry Matovcik

In 1878, George Bradford Brainerd, a noted photographer from Brooklyn, made a stop at the Mattituck railroad station as part of his itinerary to photograph Long Island Railroad stations as well as other Long Island scenes. After taking a glass plate negative image of the station depot, Brainerd ventured up Westphalia Avenue in a wagon with his camera and tripod, glass plates, dark tent, and collection of chemicals. He crossed the cove of Mattituck Creek over the wooden Westphalia Bridge and set up his camera on the shore of the creek to capture an image of the town.

The picture above is part of the image that Brainerd captured. On the right is the Westphalia Bridge. On the left, in the distance, is the Warren L. Tuthill's house with its distinctive cruciform roof, two chimneys on the north and south gables, and an open square observatory in the center.

Warren Tuthill and his wife would eventually add significant extensions on the house to accommodate summer boarders who came on the railroad from Brooklyn. Tuthill had purchased the property on the corner of Sound Avenue and Westphalia Avenue (then known as Depot Lane) in 1866, so the house most likely dates from 1867 or 1868 and is 150 years old.

Above is an aerial view of the Warren L. Tuthill house (c. 1900) and sequentially into the distance are the Episcopal Church, the Mattituck House Hotel, and the Octagon House. (The photograph was most likely taken from the water tower that once stood on the north side of the railroad tracks.) One notices again the distinct Greek Cross plan, whose roof extends to four gabled ends. The open square observatory rises from the center of the roof. In this later photograph, however, the west gabled end has been extended and includes a third chimney. There is also a large building adjacent to the back of the house that perhaps was used to accommodate guests. The Tuthills named their home "Lawn Cottage" probably from the broad lawn out back that ran north to Pike Street. The LIRR's list of boarding houses indicated that "Lawn Cottage" could accommodate 20 guests. Warren Tuthill was also a partner of Thomas Reeve in the Reeve & Tuthill grocery and general merchandise store that was once located just east of the railroad station on Love Lane and Pike Street. On the second floor of general store was Apollo Hall, a place for dances and plays by the dramatic club, meetings of the Literary Society, and political rallies.

Belmont Hall Nostalgia

This story, written by Becky Terry, is reprinted from the November 1980 Peconic Bay Shopper

The parking lot opposite the Southold Post Office [the building now occupied by Corcoran Group] was once an important community center, for on its site stood Belmont Hall, later called Community Hall.

In July 1884, the contract for building a town hall was awarded to Corey & Sturges, the mason work to be done by Moses Cleveland. J. Henry Cochran was the owner. It was a one-story building, 30 by 70 feet, with a seating capacity of 500. A commodious stage at the south end made the hall suitable for public entertainments.

The grand opening was held in October 1884 and a message was read from the Hon. Perry Belmont, Congressman from the 1st Congressional District, who donated the then large sum of $50 toward the construction, hence the name Belmont Hall. Playbills in the Whitaker files show the wide range of local talent which entertained the hall ... 1888, a concert by the Southold Brass Band; 1886, a play, "The Loan of a Lover" by the Universalist Sewing Society; 1889, "Old Fashioned District Skule" by the M.E. Church. In 1893, the Presbyterian Church gave an exhibit of Living Pictures at Belmont Hall, featuring scenes of history, works of art and Bible characters, all for 15¢ admission.

[Southold Fire Department Protection Engine Company No.1 was created Saturday, February 13, 1886 in Belmont Hall.]

St. Patrick's Dramatic Club presented "The Minister's Sweetheart" with show-stopping lines; Julia Grattan declaring, "I care no more for you than for the barking of a stray dog."; J. Leo Thompson as Judge Lester stating, "God help the woman who has a woman for a judge!"

Perhaps no play given at Belmont Hall was as popular as "the Stolen Will", first performed in 1891, revived in 1902, 1922 and again in 1957, this time at the high school. The original performance netted over $800 for a new fire signal.

In 1905 the novel projectoscope brought "moving pictures" to Belmont Hall. Through the years Gilbert & Sullivan operettas, Chataququa lectures and high school graduations were all held at the hall. A newspaper notice of 1920 requests that there be no smoking in Belmont Hall auditorium during high school basketball games. On Feb. 27, 1934, the Southold Fire Dept. Band held its first concert at the hall.

From 1922 until World War II, the Southold Players, later called the Old Town Players, under the direction of Charles Kramer, made an important cultural contribution to the East End. According to Rose Newell, the Players' biggest hit was "Strongheart". A star performer of those years was Harold "Goldie" Goldsmith. Local critics compared his acting in "The Return of Peter Grimm" with the renowned David Warfield. Some said he had the talent of a Barrymore. Bessie Gagen also received rave notices. Playbills from "Brud" Albertson's collection include "the Man From Mexico", "The Squaw Man", "Tons of Money" and three one-act plays given in 1935-36, one of which was written by another starring actress, Miriam Kramer Sivigne. During this period, that hall was enlarged to accommodate a larger stage area.

Many of us recall the summer of 1949, when a stock company came to Southold and created dramatic interest by casting local people in bit parts. One of the actors who brightened the boards of Community Hall was Walter Matthaw, now Hollywood famous, but then a beginning performer who rode his bike all over town and kept the company on its toes with his shenanigans. The company also rehearsed some of its plays in the empty Academy building.

Community Hall also served as a Youth Center. Under the Park Commission, the hall was renovated in 1945 and Friday night dances were held. Mr. and Mrs. Alan Baker headed the Chaperones. At a Valentine Party that year, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Dickerson and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Young supervised. The late "Senator" Ford provided celebrity performances at Community Hall for the benefit of the Fire Dept.

From its long history, we can see how involved this modest building became with a wide gamut of organizations and good causes. But as it does to so many buildings, time and decay spelled the end for Community Hall. At a Park District meeting in February, 1954, the vote to raze the hall was unanimous. At the same time, it was voted to tear down the dock at Founders Landing. It was hoped to build another center on the site, but because the American Legion building program was underway, it was decided to support that effort instead.

With its growing population, Southold's community activities now take place in any number of halls and building around town. The role of Belmont Hall as an all-purpose village center has become one more bit of local nostalgia.
